The GDPR (General Data Protection Regulation) will apply to the same extent in all European Union countries, including Poland, and introduces a number of changes to the rules governing the processing of personal data. According to the GDPR (General Data Protection Regulation) personal data is information about an identified or identifiable natural person, e.g. e-mail address, IP address or data in the administrator's IT systems.

The basis and the purpose of processing

The processing of personal data requires a legal basis. The GDPR provides for several types of such legal grounds for data processing, and in the case of using our services, the agreement for data processing will be necessary to conclude or perform a contract to which you are a party. The contract, in our case, is a contract for the commissioning of a legal service.

Therefore, if we conclude a contract with you for the performance of a given service, we may process your data to the extent necessary to perform this contract.

As part of our services, your data will be processed only if we or another data processor have one of the legal bases permitted by the GDPR and only for the purpose adapted to the given basis, as described above. Your data will be processed until there is a basis for this processing - i.e. in the case of the consent and until its withdrawal, restriction or other actions on your part limiting this consent, if the data is necessary for the performance of the contract - for the duration of its performance or until the claims are time-barred. If the basis for data processing is the legitimate interest of the administrator - until this legitimate interest exists.
